STATEMENT BY THE SPEAKER

(Privilege)

On Thursday, November 5, 2009 the Opposition House Leader (Mr. Yates) raised a question of privilege after having provided notice and written details of his case in accordance with the provisions of Rule 12.

The Opposition House Leader claims that the Minister of Corrections, Public Safety and Policing made certain remarks in the Assembly that were “intended to be perceived as threats and therefore to have discouraged [the Opposition House Leader] from the performance of his duties and his exercise of free speech.” The Opposition House Leader states that the statements, which the Minister later confirmed to have said to the media outside the Assembly, constituted a threat of police or legal prosecution if he persisted with his actions in the Assembly, most notably during Question Period.

Subsequent to receiving the notice of this privilege case, the Minister of Corrections, Public Safety and Policing made an apology in the Assembly for his remarks. On Orders of the Day, the Opposition House Leader presented the arguments of his case to the Assembly, to which the Government House Leader responded. Having considered the case, heard the apology by the Minister and the arguments of both House Leaders, I deferred my ruling until today. This is a serious case that is without exact precedent in this province so it was necessary for me to consult the parliamentary authorities and precedents in other parliaments. I am now prepared to rule on this case.

First, I want to refer Members to what the parliamentary texts say about interference with Member's privilege of free speech. Maingot's Parliamentary Privilege in Canada (2nd Edition), p.228, states: "...if a Member was threatened for what he said in the House that would amount to a breach of the Member's privilege of speech." Erskine May Parliamentary Practice, 23rd edition at page 144 states ( and I quote) "threatening a Member with the possibility of a trial at some future time for a question asked in the House" has been considered contempt.

It is clear that the perceived threat by one Member against another has been the basis for finding contempt in cases at other parliaments in Canada. Both Alberta and Quebec have cases where the circumstances are relevant to the case brought forward by the Opposition House Leader.

In September 1993, a Minister in Alberta objected to a line of questioning during estimates review and stated to an opposition member that "I can assure the Honourable Member across the way that he has lost any road program for the next four years." The response was raised as a question of privilege and the Speaker, in making his ruling, stated: "Threats of this kind are an extremely serious matter. There is no doubt that the implications by a Minister that action might be taken with respect to another Member's words or actions could have the effect of inhibiting freedom of speech." A withdrawal of the offending remarks closed the matter.

In May 1996, a government Member of the Alberta Legislative Assembly asked a Minister to respond to a question about a proposed opposition amendment to a bill before a committee. The question was whether the Minister "would confirm that he will not bring forward legislation to protect convicted criminals as suggested by the Liberal Opposition." The opposition Member who proposed the amendments wrote a letter to the member who asked the question. The letter was viewed to imply that civil action would be taken if the government Member continued to make defamatory remarks and false and misleading statements. The Speaker found that the letter constituted a threat and found a prima facie case of privilege had been established. The matter was quickly settled when the offending member apologized for his letter.

Similarly, in a ruling from the Quebec National Assembly in December, 2000, a Minister threatened a Member for remarks she made in debate saying she "would pay for her remarks." In this case, the Speaker accepted that the Minister had made a threat in response to comments made in debate. The question of privilege was resolved when a letter of apology that was written by the Minister to the Member and tabled in the Assembly.

It is clear from the parliamentary authorities and relevant precedents from other jurisdictions that comments made in the nature of a threat do constitute contempt of parliament. Having reviewed the details presented in this case, and the admission of the Member to having spoken the words, I find that the comments in the nature of a threat are therefore contemptuous.

The Opposition House Leader further directs attention to a letter that he received from the Deputy Minister of Corrections, Public Safety and Policing. In his case, the Opposition House Leader details that the letter is “most probably not intimidating” but cites it as evidence that the Minister meant his comments as a threat. I do not find the letter affects the privileges of the Member. I refer all members to page 235 of Maingot’s Parliamentary Privilege in Canada, 2nd edition where it states “Accordingly, not every action by an outside body which may influence the conduct of a Member of Parliament as such could now be regarded as a breach of privilege, even if it were calculated and intended to bring pressure on the Member to take or to refrain from taking a particular course.”

I will now address the apology made by the Minister of Corrections, Public Safety and Policing to the Assembly on November 5th. The Minister apologized and withdrew the inappropriate remarks.

Erskine May Parliamentary Practice (23rd edition) at page 172 states, in the section “Proceedings against member” the following: “When a Member has made an acceptable apology for the offence, the critical motion has sometimes been withdrawn. In two instances, the House condemned the Member’s conduct as a breach of privileges, but resolved that in consequence of the full and ample apology [the Member] had offered to the House, or that having regard to his withdrawal of the expressions complained of, it would not proceed any further on the matter.” Similarly, at page 267 of Maingot’s, Parliamentary Privilege in Canada, 2nd edition, in the section “Where a Member is the subject of a question of privilege” it is stated: “An apology by the offending Member will invariably close the matter without the necessity of putting the motion to a vote.” In each of the cases cited an apology ended the matter. This has also been the custom of this and other Assemblies as outlined by the precedents cited.

In consequence of the apology of the Minister, it is my decision that this case need not go further. I want to make it clear, however, that if the Minister had not apologized I would have had no other choice but to find a prima facie case of privilege. The Minister has done the honourable thing and I must accept the sincerity of the apology just as I accepted the sincerity of the Opposition House Leader’s perception that the offending words were meant as a threat.

Before leaving this subject, I would like Members to consider the unanticipated consequences of the words they sometimes choose to use in this Assembly. The Minister has apologized for words that were perceived by another Member as a threat. In the heat of debate it is sometimes difficult to know where to draw the line with the remarks made across the floor. I want to repeat what was said by the Speaker in Alberta at the close of one of the rulings I have cited: “Members are human and subject to the emotions that come with that territory: anger and pride are two that come to mind. Sometimes this job seems to require that we be superhuman in controlling our anger and our pride and in exercising good judgment and we just have to do it. If we fail, we must make amends.” The Minister has done the honourable thing by apologizing. I think there is a lesson for all of us in this case.
